TUG SINKS AS CREW ESCAPE

Captain and Six Men Have Close Call in Lower Bay

TRIED TO RUN BOAT ASHORE

The Urbanus Dart Strikes Bottom, Rolls Over and Goes Down After Capt. John Gully and Crew Try to Save Her.

six of his crew just managed to escape day night, Thomas J. Lalor, one of the soon as the fire was discovered the Urbanus Dart was headed for the shoal, but she struck bottom before she was expected to, rolled over and sank.

The crew got the boat over and rowed to Sandy Hook, where they were transfered to the deck of the steamship Olaf Kyrre, which took them into quarantine A despatch boat then carried them the rest of the way to the buttery. The Urbanus Dart was a 40-ton tug built in Brunswick, Ga., in 1880. Capt John Gully, who hails from Brooklynowned her. In all probability the Ur banus Dart will be a total loss.

The tug started outside early yester day morning. She was on a cruise for oners or other vessels which might need her aid. At about 4 o'clock one o' the crew saw a puff of smoke, followed by a spurt of flame, coming from a part of the tug just forward of the boiler. The tug was then some 500 yards off shore, picking her way slowly through the Romer Shoales.

It was not long before the flames began to make play about the pilot house while the crew vainly fought to conquer them with buckets of water. Despite the water the fire increased un til the position of the seven men was by no means an east one. The captain signalled for full speed ahead and held to the wheel in the pilot house. The Urbanus Dart raced at her highest speed for the sand bar extending out from Sandy Hook point. Before it reached there an explosion occurred of force sufficient to seriously damage the That let the water in and the boat filled rapidly

Several of the small craft clustered about the Hook heard the Urbanus Dart's siren blowing and saw the thick volumes of snoke rising from her decks te roll away over the water. They made for the scene, but the tug was al' ready on the sand when they reached there.

Besides Capt. Gully there was Mate Daniels and five hands, all of whom are safe in Manhattan now but without a Stickney at the county court house yesterday. Mr. Lalor was represented by T. W. Moloney and Mr. Walsh by Thomas H. Browne. Mr. Lalor's case was continued until next Monday morning and his bail was fixed at $200; which was furnished by W. E. Aldrich. Mr. Walsh walved examination and was bound over to the county court. His bail was fixed at the same amount and it was furnished by Mrs, John F. McGnirk. H. G. was released Saturday night on $200 bail furnished by Charles H. Cleveland, shortly after the raid on the room over the Union Pacific tea store. The raids were the result of a well matured plan of State's Attorney Jones. A couple of Boston detectives have been in the city working up the case and Saturday night was selected because it was known that all the joints would by in full blast then. The raid would have been made a week earlier, but the state's attorney received a tip that one of the men he was most anxious to catch would not be among those present that night. About 40 poker players and spectators were caught in the raid and they were representative of every walk of life. In the Walsh place was one mun who went into bankruptey last week and who is said to have been ruined by following the game. In one room at The mostly sons of business end profession-al men.
